The map (of 1824) shows the network of new roads, coloured red-brown, built along the valleys by the local turnpike trusts in late 18th and early 19th century.

But where does the elephant fit in to this story?

Nick Herbert is a former editor of the Victoria County History (VCH) for Gloucestershire. VCH was founded in 1899 as a national project to write the history of every county in England. At its inception, the project was dedicated to Queen Victoria, which is how it derives its name.
